摘要

本次參加由加拿大魁北克市所主辦之世界休閒遊憩研討會，感受到世界各國對休閒遊憩的重視與日俱增，歐美等先進國家在休閒空間、設施與教育上，當然是值得我們學習的對象，而像是中國與伊朗等國在經濟成長的帶動下，對人民休閒活動的相關研究亦獲得重視。不同國情的相關研究呈現不同之研究結果與發現，從中亦發現部分研究者之研究主題與所發現之議題，國內目前較少學者加以著墨，亦可做為日後研究之發展。在參與會議的過程中，亦發現本次會議結合主辦城市的節慶活動以及配合當地特色產業之觀摩活動，對於該城市的宣傳與形象之塑造多有助益，亦可做為日後舉辦相關研討會議時與當地節慶和當地特色結合之參考。

“A whole new world!”: Exploring the relationship between Taiwanese mother’s agency and their interpretation of leisure during the empty-nested period

Yu-Ling Chen Taiwan Sport University (Taichung)

In the past two decades, a number of scholars have pointed out many ways that women’s leisure is problematic (Chen, 2003; Wearing, 1998), calling for us to re-consider and re-define women’s leisure from new perspectives. Along with the development of feminism, the few researchers who care about women’s leisure have gradually shifted their attention from leisure constraints to the issue of how women challenge those constraints actively by re-constructing their identities. Topics about women’s subjectivity, autonomy, and empowerment are a rising and important interest in this subfield (Shaw 2001). Along these lines, the major purpose of this study is to examine how/when leisure can serve as a “strategic” solution to help women manage their empty-nested period, and further investigate how those mothers reveal their agency when they adapt themselves to the new conditions. A qualitative approach was utilized as the fundamental methodology for this study, and focus groups and participant observation were used for data collection from June 2004 to May 2006. Grounded theory and interpretivistic approach suggested by many qualitative researchers

(Glaser & Strauss 1967) has been employed as the primary approach to analyze the conversation texts acquired through 30 interviewees. The result of the analysis indicates that mothers in this special life span have different recognitions toward the concept of “leisure time”, which is suddenly increased after their grown-up kids moving out from the family. Leisure, in this perspective, has been utilized as a practical substitute for those kids, especially for the purpose of bridging the gap resulted from the feeling of “empty nest”. Besides, mothers in this crucial life span highly value the importance of appropriate leisure arrangements and tend to strategically use varied kinds of leisure or recreation activities, such as learning and volunteering, to re-construct their new identities. For those women, the role of leisure is beneficial, because leisure not only keeps them from the possible damage by the feeling of loss, but helps them to extend their social network and achieve the new balance of their everyday lives.

“From Altruism to Individualism”

Exploring the social identity of Taiwan voluntary workers from the viewpoint of mid-life crisis

Yu-Ling Chen & Li-Ju Chen Taiwan Sport University(Taichung)

The traditional idea about volunteering has confronted a serious transformation in modern society¹. According to the current policy of voluntary works in Taiwan, the basic meaning of volunteering is to offer services and bring contribution to local community and people in need, especially through gratuitous behavior that involves self-sacrifice. However, a few scholars ever indicated that the motives and experiences of being volunteers have dramatically changed (Stebbins, 2001). For example, Strigas and Jackson(2003)claim that egoistic interest of volunteers is the most dynamic factor in affecting volunteers' decision making; McCurley and Lynch(2000) also suggest that self-interest has been concerned as the most significant purpose in participating voluntary activities. Moreover, Rehberg (2005) indicates that altruistic motives typically occurred with more self-centered motives for volunteering. Based on those experiential studies, the new explanation toward the concept of volunteering is needed to be re-examined and re-constructed. Especially when the number of volunteers has grown rapidly every year in recent Taiwan society, how people recognize the role and meaning of the voluntary activity is essential.

Due to this reason, the major purpose of this research was to explore and discover the process of identity transformation of volunteers. In addition, this study also attempts to enrich more modern explanation to the concept of serious leisure and discover the role of volunteers in current Taiwan communities. Primarily, the in-depth interviews and 3-month participant observation has been utilized for collecting data in this study. From June 2006 to April 2007, totally 10 middle-aged interviewees, who has more than 3 years voluntary experience from Tri-mountain national Scenic Area, have been selected for providing their insights regarding their role and working experience. The acquired data was analyzed by ground theory, and the three major themes were emerged: First, self-centered motives, such as making friends, acquiring certifications, expanding social networks, play a crucial role for middle-aged volunteers, especially related to how they managing their mid-life crisis. Second, how those voluntary workers identify volunteering is a dynamic process, not fixed. In other words, the meaning of volunteering is an evolving process along with the different stages that volunteers involving in. Furthermore, the experience of being volunteers is not “good” for every voluntary worker. Instead, the marginalized effect of serious leisure that possibly backlashes to participants’ family cohesion will emerge in those who “devoted themselves” to voluntary activities.

“Getting old actively”:

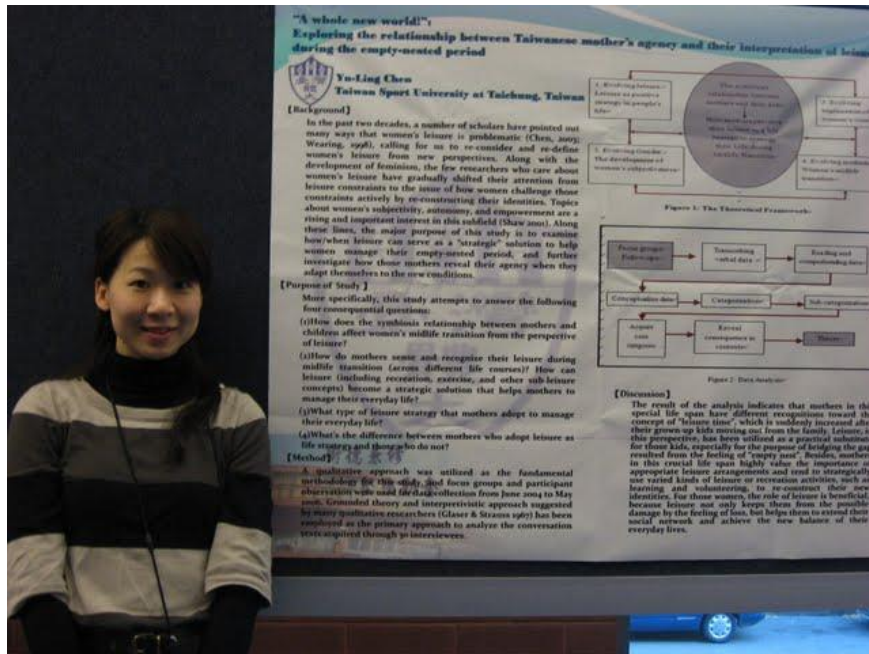

Exploring the relationship between the awareness of hypokinetic diseases and exercise habits among Taiwan senior citizens.

Yen-Ting Lin¹ & Yu-Ling Chen²

¹Asia Universtiy, Taichung, Taiwan. ²Taiwan Sport University(Taichung)

According to the recent record of Taiwan annual medical expenditure, people who older than 60 years old are the major users(>48.9%) of current medical service in Taiwan. A few studies have predicted this problem and indicated that the health condition of senior citizens should be seriously concerned in Taiwan society because of the impact it possibly caused in the development of Taiwan medical system. In this context, many scholars suggest that elders in modern society should learn how to manage better life style and acknowledge the benefits brought by the regular exercise, which is able to help them to maintain the stability of their everyday lives and further achieve the state of wellness, instead of getting old frailly. Along these lines, the major purpose of this study is to understand how elder people in Taiwan perceive the concept of health and further investigate the linkage between elders’ exercise habits and their knowledge of the hypokinetic disease that directly relates to elder’s health conditions. Survey questionnaires were sent to random samples of officially organized senior citizen clubs in Taichung Area for more than 1 year. All together 500 questionnaires were issued, and 423 were returned, among which 387, or 77.4%, were valid. Data were analyzed through descriptive statistics, chi-square, and oneway ANOVA analysis. Results of analysis are as follows: First, senior citizens in different demographic features, including gender, educational background, and family conditions, show significant differences in the average of time spent in exercise. Gender did not significantly affect elders’ exercise participation in this aspect. Second, there is a positive correlation between elders’ knowledge toward the concept of hypokinetic diseases and their willingness to participate in regular exercises. In other words, when elders understand the threat possibly caused by the inactive life style, elder people tend to increase the frequency and time spent in exercise. Furthermore, the data has shown that female elders highly interested in transforming their inactive life styles than males, and recognizing health as a crucial factor of improving their quality of life.

Loisir : pluralité, identité, solidarité / Leisure: Plurality, Identity, Solidarity

Comment tenir compte de la pluralité, de la diversité tout en préservant l'identité et la solidarité

Dans un contexte de pluralité culturelle, de pluralité des valeurs et d'inégalités économiques et politiques, les communautés contemporaines sont aussi pluralistes (plurielles). Si on reconnaît au loisir des capacités de développement de l'identité des communautés et de l'appartenance des citoyens, le loisir peut aussi exacerber les différences. Du tourisme envahissant à la globalisation de la culture, au communautarisme et au « cocooning », le loisir a aussi la capacité de fractionner la communauté, de réduire le sentiment identitaire et de créer des conflits. Dans ce contexte, le Congrès portera sa réflexion sur deux questions centrales :

Loisir : espace public et espace privé / Leisure: Public and Private Space

Le loisir dans son sens large devient-il un ferment de l'individualisme ou le créateur de liens sociaux et communautaires ?

Le champ du loisir constitue dans plusieurs pays la zone privilégiée de l'engagement bénévole et citoyen, principalement auprès des associations, terreau du capital social essentiel à la constitution de communautés fortes. De même, plusieurs lieux, qu'ils soient sous responsabilité publique ou civile tels les parcs, les centres culturels, les centres communautaires, les espaces sportifs, les camps de vacances, constituent une expérience démocratique et participative essentielle et sont autant d'environnements qui favorisent les liens sociaux. Toutefois, il y a une forte tendance à confiner l'expérience de loisir aux zones privées et à la consommation. Ce sous thème traitera des questions suivantes :

- Comment et à quelles conditions la pratique, la gouvernance et l'organisation du loisir favorisent-elles la constitution de liens sociaux et de communautés démocratiques ?
- Quel rôle doit-on accorder à la société civile et comment développer la vie associative ?

In the broad sense of its meaning, does leisure promote individualism or is it the creator of social and community ties?

For several countries, the field of leisure is a privileged sector for citizen and volunteer commitment, mainly through associations, a breeding ground essential to the establishment of strong communities. Also, several places, whether under public or associative responsibility such as parks, cultural centers, community centers, sport complexes, or summer camps, are an essential democratic and participative experience and, moreover, are environments which promote social ties. However, there is a strong tendency to confine the leisure experience to private zones and consumption. This sub-theme will address the following questions:

- How and under what conditions do the practice, the governing and the organisation of leisure promote the creation of social ties and democratic communities?
- What role should be given to civil society and associative life and how should it be developed?

Loisir : prévention, santé et qualité de vie / Leisure: Prevention, Health, Quality of Life
Comment et à quelles conditions les communautés pensent-elles profiter des forces du loisir en regard de la prévention, de la santé et de la qualité de vie ?
À l'évidence, le loisir favorise la santé et la qualité de vie et constitue un déterminant de la santé au sens de l'Organisation mondiale pour la santé (organisme de l'Organisation des Nations Unies) pour qui la santé se définit comme : la capacité physique, psychique et sociale d'une personne d'agir dans son milieu et d'accomplir les rôles qu'elle entend assumer, d'une manière acceptable pour elle-même et pour les groupes dont elle fait partie.

Yu-Ling Chen
Taiwan Sport University at Taichung, Taiwan

[Background]
In the past two decades, a number of scholars have pointed out many ways that women's leisure is problematic (Chen, 2001; Wearing, 1998), calling for us to re-consider and re-define women's leisure from new perspectives. Along with the development of feminism, the few researchers who care about women's leisure have gradually shifted their attention from leisure constraints to the issue of how women challenge those constraints actively by re-constructing their identities. Topics about women's subjectivity, autonomy, and empowerment are a rising and important interest in this subfield (Shaw 2001). Along these lines, the major purpose of this study is to examine how/when leisure can serve as a "strategic" solution to help women manage their empty-nested period, and further investigate how those mothers reveal their agency when they adapt themselves to the new conditions.

[Purpose of Study]
More specifically, this study attempts to answer the following four consequential questions:
 (1) How does the symbiosis relationship between mothers and children affect women's midlife transition from the perspective of leisure?
 (2) How do mothers sense and recognize their leisure during midlife transition (across different life courses)? How can leisure (including recreation, exercise, and other sub-leisure concepts) become a strategic solution that helps mothers to manage their everyday life?
 (3) What type of leisure strategy that mothers adopt to manage their everyday life?
 (4) What's the difference between mothers who adopt leisure as life strategy and those who do not?

[Method]
A qualitative approach was utilized as the fundamental methodology for this study, and focus groups and participant observation were used for data collection.

The diagram illustrates a theoretical framework with a central circle: "The symbiotic relationship between mothers and their kids" with a sub-note "Have mothers positive leisure as a life strategy to manage their life during Midlife Transition?". This central circle is connected to four surrounding boxes: "1. Evolving leisure - Leisure as positive strategy in people's life", "2. Evolving Gender - The development of women's subjectivity", "3. Evolving motherhood - Women's constraints", and "4. Evolving motherhood - Women's midlife transition". Below this, a flowchart shows the research process: "Focus groups, Follow-ups" leads to "Transcripts and coding data", which leads to "Conceptualize data", then "Case conceptualization", and finally "Agree case categories" leading to "Evolving concepts".

[Discussion]
The research specifically conceptualizes this for research in applied...

參與本屆世界休閒學術研討會之台灣與會學者合影

參加心得

本次參加由加拿大魁北克市所主辦之世界休閒遊憩研討會，感受到世界各國對休閒遊憩的重視與日俱增，歐美等先進國家在休閒空間、設施與教育上，當然是值得我們學習的對象，而像是中國與伊朗等國在經濟成長的帶動下，對人民休閒活動的相關研究亦獲得重視。不同國情的相關研究呈現不同之研究結果與發現，從中亦發現部分研究者之研究主題與所發現之議題，國內目前較少學者加以著墨，亦可做為日後研究之發展。

在參與會議的過程中，亦發現本次會議結合主辦城市的節慶活動以及配合當地特色產業之觀摩活動，對於該城市的宣傳與形象之塑造多有助益，亦可做為日後舉辦相關研討會議時與當地節慶和當地特色結合之參考。

參觀結合本次研討會舉辦之休閒遊憩產業相關博覽會

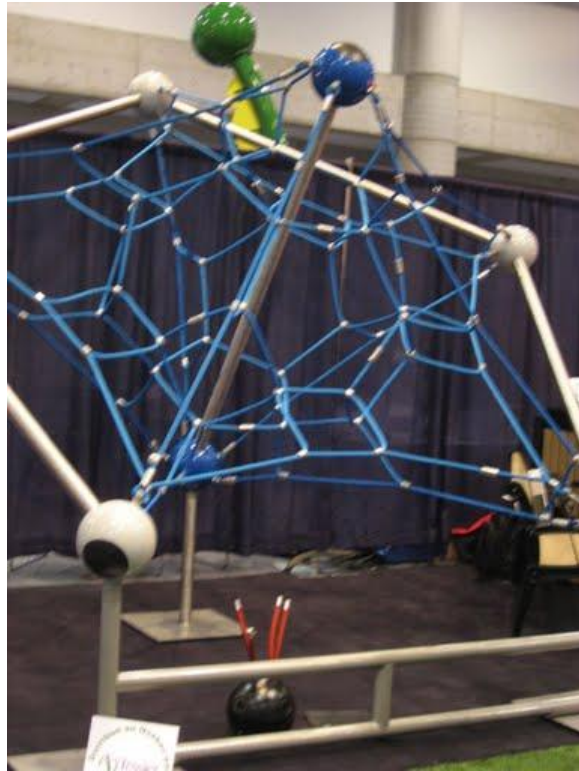

另外，大會更與休閒相關產業合作展覽新型的休閒器材

這是攀岩器材

西方真是重視小孩的地方 兒童休閒器材熱賣

playground 的攀爬器材

撒水給小朋友玩的器材

下一屆的 WLRA 將由韓國舉辦，除了學術研討年會之外，另外也準備了第一屆 Leisure Game，正式鼓勵休閒運動的競賽項目。韓國人積極的態度真是值得學習。

下次 2010 WLRA 在韓國濟州 也就是冬季戀歌的所在地
